Introduction

Both Lebanon and the Netherlands are small states surrounded by powerful neighbors, yet both sustain independent, innovative economies that thrive on tolerance and open-mindedness. Our two countries hold strong ties in various sources of trade, and retrieve mutual inspiration from branches such as design and innovative technology. The Netherlands is proud of this cooperation, and hopes to maintain and expand this strong partnership with Lebanon in upcoming years. But Dutch-Lebanese cooperation is not limited to the economic arena.

An important element of our foreign policy in Lebanon is centered on providing support to maintain Lebanon’s peace, security and culture of human rights. Lebanon is a unique state in the Middle East, lauded for its press freedom, its founding membership of the United Nations, and its ratification of a vast number of human rights treaties. Characterized as tolerant, freedom-cherishing, and overtly hospitable towards outsiders, Lebanon is one of the few democracies in the region. The Netherlands strongly supports these key hallmarks of Lebanon.

Human rights and social cohesion thrive in a context of peace and security. The ongoing turmoil in other corners of the Middle East – the recent spread of ISIS in Iraq and Syria, the protracted crisis in Syria, and the escalating tensions between Israelis and Palestinians – threaten Lebanon’s stability. Unresolved tensions among domestic sectarian groups form a source of vulnerability for Lebanon. Peacebuilding, inter-sectarian dialogue and socio-economic prosperity are therefore essential pillars to stand against increasing hardships on Lebanese soil.

It is in this light that the Netherlands Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Netherlands Embassy in Lebanon support Lebanon with substantial amounts of their humanitarian stability and human rights budget. This report provides an overview of the sectors that our bilateral support is channeled to.

I. The impact of the Syria crisis - showing solidarity with Lebanon

Since the offset of the crisis in Syria, over a million refugees have registered with UNHCR and UNRWA in Lebanon. As of 7 May 2015, 1.183.327 Syrian refugees were registered with UNHCR, the equivalent to more than a quarter of Lebanon's resident population. The influx has put severe pressure on Lebanon's public services in the field of education, health, water, electricity, and waste management, sparking tensions between domestic groups and refugees. To prevent an escalation, it is of paramount importance that refugee relief is organized efficiently; focusing not only on the needs of Syrian and Palestinian-Syrian newcomers, but also on the burden carried by the Lebanese host-community.

Since 2012, we have pledged around 147 million Euros of extra humanitarian funds for Syria and its neighboring countries. This in addition to the 200 million USD that is annually made available for the UNCERF, UNHCR, UNICEF, WFP and ICRC. For the sake of efficiency and flexibility, our pledges are typically "un-earmarked", which means that it is left at the discretion of the receiving International Organization to channel the contributions to the areas that are most in need. This approach allows for the flexibility and efficiency necessary when immediate crises warrant adequate response.

We estimate that about 100.6 million euros of the Dutch contribution has been used for projects in Lebanon. In 2012 around 11 million euros has been used for Lebanon; in 2013 around 20 million euros; and in 2014 around 25.6 million euros. In September 2015, Minister Koenders of Foreign Affairs pledged an additional 25 million euros bringing our contribution for this year to around 44 million euros. The Netherlands Red Cross, UNHCR, and UNICEF are among our most important partners. Projects targeting Syrian refugees and vulnerable Lebanese host communities cover a wide spectrum of humanitarian and developmental goals.

Early 2014, the Netherlands donated 3.7 million euros to the Lebanese Education Sector Development Programme, implemented by the European Commission in cooperation with UNHCR and UNICEF. Likewise, UNICEF NL contributed around 1 million euros to the 'Reaching all Children with Education' (RACE) focusing on the improvement of the educational sector for both Lebanese and Syrian refugees. An additional contribution of 3 million euros has been approved for RACE in 2015. The Netherlands is also committed to providing secondary education and vocational training to youth through a commitment of 5 million euros to UNICEF as part of Minister Koenders' announcement. This aims at empowering youth and enhancing their chances for a better future.

UNHCR and WFP in Lebanon continue to be essential partners to ensure food security and protection of refugees as well as vulnerable Lebanese families who live in extreme poverty. Netherlands' contribution for 2014-15 in this respect is estimated at around 8 million euros to UNHCR and 9 million euros to WFP. An additional 2.5 million euros will go to UNHCR in 2015 for winterization and other humanitarian interventions.

As vulnerable community groups become increasingly involved in negative coping mechanisms including child labour, early marriage, and other forms of exploitation. The Netherlands committed 2 million euros for UNICEF Lebanon to utilize sports and psychosocial support programs in order to reach and empower these vulnerable community members.

The Netherlands supports partners whose assistance programs not only benefit Syrian refugees, but also the Lebanese host community. To point out our concern for Lebanese host communities, the World Bank has initiated since the beginning of 2014 a new Multi-Donor Trust Fund; the Lebanon Syria Crisis Trust Fund (LSCTF) which seeks to mitigate the impact of the Syria crisis on Lebanon through humanitarian development projects that benefit Lebanese host communities, and likewise Syrian refugees. The overall aim is to create stabilization and to develop social cohesion between the Lebanese and the Syrians and to counteract growing tensions. The Netherlands contributes with 3.4 million USD to the LSCTF for 2014-2015.

In 2015, the Netherlands increased its support to Lebanese host communities to share the pressure that the large refugee presence has exerted on infrastructure, as well as on social and economic sectors. This support is channeled through: UNDP with a contribution of 9.5 million euros to its Lebanon Host Communities Support Project; and the Dutch International Union of Municipalities VNGI with a 3 year contribution of around 4.5 million euros.

II. Demining - making Lebanon a safer place

Mines and cluster munitions still pose a daily risk of death or injury to civilians in Lebanon. Land that is contaminated with remnants of conflict cannot be used for tending crops or building houses. The Syrian refugee crisis coincides with an enhanced risk of casualties, for the newcomers might not be aware of the dangers that lie scattered across Lebanese land on lands that are suitable for farming. The Netherlands has put its strong reputation on demining activities at the service of Lebanese society. Since 2012, we have contributed over 8 million USD to clearance and risk education activities of Dan Church Aid and the Mines Advisory Group to make Lebanon a safer place.

III. Palestine refugees - supporting humanitarian needs and human development

As long as a just and lasting solution to the conflict that displaced Palestine remains elusive, support for the Palestinians who sought refuge in neighboring countries or in the Palestinian territories is imperative. Lebanon currently hosts some 450.000 Palestine refugees, including about 44.000 Palestine refugees from Syria.

The Netherlands is a longstanding supporter of UNRWA; an organization that plays a key role in advocating and providing for (long-term) humanitarian needs of exiled Palestinians. Annually, the Netherlands pledges approximately 11 million euros to UNRWA for unearmarked purposes, on a total of 393 million euros of unearmarked funds that UNRWA received since 2012. Of this total of unearmarked funds, UNRWA channels approximately 54.6 million euros (or around 14%) to projects in Lebanon. In 2013, 2 million euros were made available for Palestine refugees from Syria specifically; Lebanon received 300.000 euros of this sum. In 2015, an additional regional pledge of 2 million euros was made for Palestinian refugees in Syria with Lebanon also receiving around 300.000 euros.

Besides unearmarked contributions to UNRWA, the Netherlands places special emphasis on relief for Palestinians in Lebanon through its human rights framework. Since 2010, the Netherlands Embassy has allocated 417.000 USD of its human rights budget to the UNRWA/ PINACLE legal assistance program. This project serves legal aid provision to Palestine refugees in Northern Lebanon and the Bekaa Valley, and works on capacity building and mobilizing public awareness on the hardships that Palestinians face.

The Embassy also maintains a partnership with Naba'a, an NGO that organizes drug prevention information sessions in Saida (Sidon) and the nearby Ein El-Hilweh refugee camp for both Palestinian and Lebanese youth.

Netherlands rehabilitates schools and supports education of refugee children.

IV. Justice - working towards impartial rule of law

Lebanon's recent history is marked by repeated civil and internationalized conflicts. Assassinations and suicide bombings still affect the daily lives of civilians. Truth and justice are essential ingredients for sustainable peace and reconciliation. The creation of the Special Tribunal for Lebanon following UNSC Resolution 1757 therefore has our full support. As host of the "legal capital of the world", it is our goal to support Lebanon in establishing an impartial rule of law.

The seat of the Special Tribunal in The Hague is financed by the Dutch State. In 2013, a voluntary contribution of 500.000 euros was granted to the STL, accompanied by an additional 36.000 euros for outreach activities with NGOs for 2013-15.

Moreover, STL organizes every year, together with the Asser Institute in the Netherlands and nine Lebanese universities, the Inter-University Program on International Criminal Law and Procedure for Lebanese law students. The curriculum of the program includes the history of International law, genocide, crimes against humanity, war crimes, terrorism and the role of the STL, the rights of the accused and respectively the victims in international criminal proceedings. By 2016, over 600 students would have participated in the program.

V. Human rights - working towards sustainable peace

Human Rights

The values that underpin human rights law are universal, and hence serve as a platform for peace-building and constructive dialogue. The Netherlands Embassy in Lebanon has committed to partnerships with Lebanese NGOs that raise awareness, improve, and lobby for respect for human rights in Lebanon in various fields. Our human rights framework covers a wide array of civil, as well as social and economic rights such as gender equality, tolerance towards LGBTs, freedom of (internet) expression, torture, etc. Conflict transformation and peacebuilding received special attention in 2015 as political stalemate and internal tensions increased. A budget of around 600.000 euros is allocated on yearly basis for such NGO support.

Besides Lebanese NGOs that are funded directly by the embassy, a number of international human rights NGOs carry out projects on Lebanese soil that are supported by the Funding Leadership for Opportunities for Women (FLOW), a program of the Dutch Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Commitments were made to the Kvinna till Kvinna Foundation, Women's Empowerment and Leadership Development for Democratization (WELDD), and V-Day Karama; all organizations run projects in Lebanon on the advancement of women's social-political position. In addition, since 2011, running up to 2015, 1.65 million USD is made available for the Lebanese wing of PAX for Peace, an organization that carries out projects focusing on good governance, democratization and security.

VI. Capacity building

Ongoing conflicts in the Arab region underline the fragility of political and economic systems in the Middle East. States, civil society actors, political parties and other stakeholders lack the capacity to help bring about reforms to secure peace, security and prosperity. Cycles of revolution and repression, increasing sectarian schisms and lack of efforts to commit to sustainable means of conflict resolution, impede achieving structural positive change. The Netherlands contributes to break this negative spiral through support to International Alert, an International Non-governmental Organization that has three projects running in Lebanon.

In addition, the Netherlands contributed approximately 725.000 USD, which is channeled via UNDP, to the "Common Space Initiative (CSI). CSI provides a platform for informal dialogue among stakeholders from various disciplines to explore options for reform, constitutional strengthening and development, even when formal State structures fail to do so. It aspires to influence public policy and explore options for stability and development through multi-disciplinary and all-inclusive consensus building processes that address various political, social and economic issues.

VII. The Lebanese Armed Forces

The Lebanese Armed Forces play a crucial role in preserving stability in Lebanon. The Netherlands is contributing up to 2.4 million USD to the LAF for a period of three years in line with the National Capabilities Development Plan and the 5 year CIMIC action plan. Strengthening the stabilization efforts of the LAF is a main focus of our support, next to support for further development of Integrated Border Management in Lebanon. Maintaining a strong and accountable security apparatus is of great importance in Lebanon, given the fragile security situation.

The Netherlands Forensic Institute will therefore provide technical and crime management training support to forensic specialists from the Lebanese security and judicial sectors through a 3 years program that totals around 1.4 million USD. In 2015, Foreign Minister Koenders also announced a donation of 20 ambulances to LAF, the costs of these are estimated 600.000 Euros.

Netherlands Integrated Border Management Training to Lebanese Armed Forces

VIII. The Netherlands and the EU

The Netherlands contributes financially to supporting Lebanon as part of their membership of the European Union. The EU seeks to help Lebanon in developing and remaining a stable, democratic, politically open and economically strong neighbor. The bilateral relations are based on the EU-Lebanon Association Agreement, which is a framework for political, social and economic dialogue, substantial development and humanitarian assistance. The EU-Lebanon Action Plan transforms these objectives into detailed actions, which reflects the principles of the European Neighborhood Policy (ENP). In the period 2014-2016, the ENP is focusing on justice and security sector reform; social cohesion, sustainable economic development and vulnerable groups; sustainable and transparent management of energy and natural resources.

The EU has been Lebanon's steady partner in responding to the spill-over from the Syrian crisis. The normal annual bilateral EU support to Lebanon is around EUR 80 million. Since the beginning of the Syrian conflict the EU has furthermore allocated EUR 486.2 million (EUR 209.1 million humanitarian and EUR 277.1 million 'non-humanitarian') in additional funds to deal with the consequences of the conflict for Lebanon.
